Adversarial review request

Read RESEARCH_MEMO.md as an exploratory dossier, not as a finished paper. The objective is a significant contribution to Canadian historical knowledge. The previous demographic note failed that test.

Please assess:

1. Does the proposed distinction among production failure, restricted farm establishment and outside opportunities offer a genuinely discriminating historical test, or only a familiar thesis with more observations?
2. Which predecessor most directly anticipates that test? Give verifiable references; do not infer novelty from silence.
3. Is the treatment of Bond, Geloso and Swanson fair? In particular, distinguish the written panel equation from estimable date effects, and the prose issue from the agreement of Tables 4 and A3.
4. Could the available aggregate census variables identify any of the competing mechanisms? Specify the indispensable additional evidence and the claims that would remain ecological.
5. What single result would justify a substantial historical claim, and what result should kill the project?

The attached source audit confirms four workbook-versus-print discrepancies. It does not connect those discrepancies to the external authors' datasets. Please do not make that connection without evidence.

Return a verdict of proceed, redesign, or reject, with the strongest objection first. Do not reward a more ambitious title, larger dataset, or elaborate methods for their own sake.
